ever. All the various methods of treating cancer were resorted to; for five weeks in succession my breast was burned with caustic three times a day, and for six it was daily syringed with a greak solution of nitric acid, and the cavity or internal ulcer was so large that it held over an ounce of the solution. The Doctor probed the ulcer and examined the bone, and said the disease was advancing rapidly to the lungs, and if I did not get a great solution. The present solution is a superior solution of the solution of the solution. The series was advancing rapidly to the lungs, and if I did not get stamined, but finding no relief from what had been done, and feeling I was rapidly getting worse, I almost despaired of recovery, considered my case oearly houseless.

Seeing various testimonials and certificates of care by the see of "Sarte's Saraparail.La." in cases similar to my own, I concluded to try a few bottles, several of which were used, but from the long deep seated character of my disease, produced no very decided change; considering this as the only probable cure for my case. I persevered, until the disease was entirely cured. It is now over eleven months since the cure was completed; there is not the slightest appearance of a return. I, therefore, pronounce myself will, and the cure entirely effected by "Sanna's Saraparail.La." as I look no other medicine of any kind during the time I was using it, nor have I taken any since. Please excuse this long deferred acknowledgment, which I think it my duty to make. Your valuable Saraparilla cured me, with the blessing of Divine Providence, when nothing else could, and I feel myself under lasting obligations to you. I can say mmy things I cannot write, and I do most espectfully invite ladies afflicted as I have been to call upon sea and I will satisfy them fully of the truth as stated above, and many other things in reference to the case.

About 12 o'clock the Farmers' Club assembled, Colonel CLARK in the chair.

The following fruits, &c., were presented for the inspection of the club and their consideration— Twelve Quinces, from Mr. Van Horne, of this city, weighing ten and a half pounds, cultivated certain description of peat, for the purposes of agriculture.

Mr Carter then drew the attention of the meeting to a stalk of hemp presented by Charles Cunning; am, k.q., of the inith ward. It measured eight inches round the joints, and six inches round the booy; the topmost branch was 16½ feet high; and the branches extended between five and six feet. It was more than two men could carry, and a spring cart was obliged to be used for that purpose. Mr. Carter said that he had been informed that by heating water to 160 degrees, the hemp would come out finer than flax, and in some degree supersede the cutton. The produce of this one stalk would not be less than 2 lbs of very good, hemp. He recommended the attention of iarmers particularly to the cultivation of hemp, the soil and character of this county being generally well adapted for its production. That during the whole of his travels in Europe he never saw such a stalk as the one then before the meeting.

character of the country cenn generally whole of his travels in Europe he never saw such a stalk as the one then before the meeting.

It was then stated by a member that generally the larger the stalks were the more coarse was the hemp, and of less value.

Mr. D. J. Baows drew the attention of the meeting to a specimen of Osage Oronge, which he presented, the sur lace of which, he said, was rough like Mosaic, only all of a color. He said it was a native of Red River, and as an ornamental tree was exceedingly valuable, and made most excellent fences. There had been an attempt to propagate the silk worm on it, but not with success; this wood would impirt a dye to water; and was used by the Indians for bows, and it was said that they could do more execution, in killing animals, with a bew made of the wood of his tree, than others could with a rife, and it was in consequence called by them "bow-wood." It grew in all the Southern States, where it was found valuable as fences, but could not be cultivated further North than Pennsylvania.

The Chairman drew the attention of the meeting to a fact, that a lady of his acquaintance had placed some tomatoes in brine, for about three weeks, for the purpose of preserving, some of which were not quite ripe—that afterwards she put them into vinegar, and when she required them for use, some time alterwards, she found that the more ripe had resisted the sait and vinegar, and had as fine a flavor as any that had ever been eaten when they were in season. This had suggested to him whether it was not possible to preserve this truit in full perfection for the winter season, by some such means; and recommended those present, who had an opportunity, to make some experiment on the subject. Care must be taken to preserve the stream of the life some experiment on the subject. Care must be taken to preserve the stream of the life some experiment on the subject. Care must be taken to preserve the stream, and the brine be a little stronger than sea water.

The Scrarraw addressed the meeting o

The Chairman said, the farmers of some parts of Long Island adopted the system, with great success, and it was found that cattle was very lond of the fodder it produced Mr. Syrkik wished to know if any person present made butter in January or February, from cattle led on this fodder?

foldier? Mr. Carren described the way that was necessary to promote the growth of corn sown broad cust, by which a man and a couple of horses could drag 10 or 12 acres per day, and this would be only required about four times in the season. It was practiced in Indiana and Illinois, and the consequence was that the yield average de inty bushels per acre.

A desultory conversation then ensued on the cause of the difference of flavor in the same description of fruit, and sometimes from the same tree. Some thought it arose from the soil, and others from the plants growing near the tree.

sometimes from the same tree. Some thought it arose from the soil, and others from the plants growing near the tree.

It was stated that a greater quantity of syrup might be obtained from the mapie tree by tapping it near the root, beneath the earth, than above the ground.

Mr. Para drew the attention of the meeting to a statement published in Dr. Gardiner's lecture on guans, which recommended the farmers of this country not to purchase that article for sgrieultural purposes; and, after what had passed in the club on this subject, wished to know if such recommendation had the sanction of the club.

The CHAIRMAN said the recommendation of Dr. Gardiner was for the farmers not to buy it at the present high prices. If the article could be had at a proper price, it would be better to use it.

A very animated discussion took place on the the various articles used for manure. Many contending that our land possessed sufficient for its cultivation; and it was said that if the same amount was laid out in improvements of agriculture as had been paid recently for guano, as good crops would have been produced, and more land brought into a state of cultivation. That the country had within itself, or close adjoining, certain descriptions of manure which had never been fairly tried, and might be found as productive as guano, of which facts several instances were given. The Chairman particularly alluded to a certain description of soil found on the Bahama Islands, which he had tried and found productive. The nature and qualities of these different manures was then entered into. Ultimately the subject was referred over to the next meeting, when Dr. Gardiner was expected to be present.

The meeting thea adjourned.

Gambling Unmasked; by J. H. Green, "the reformed gambler"—Redding & Co, New York.—This is a work which every parent ought to place in the hands of his children, to guard them against this most pernicious vice; the examples set forth, the expose made of the tricks and schemes practised by gamblers to entrap the incautious, cannot but have a salutary tendency, to make them aware of the great sin and folly of pursuing such amusement. Merchants and brokers would, also, do well in placing a copy of this work in the hands of the young men in their employ; it might prevent many a bright youth from falling into the depths of sin and misery.
